

ABSTRACT:

This poster proposes mobile energy resources to be used in natural disaster relief. Mobile energy systems are able to be prepositioned to connectable areas on the electric grid in order to provide power to those experiencing an outage due to a severe weather event. The following subjects are discussed as well: challenges, solutions, the future of the technology, and economic comparisons to stationary generators.